Tourist Protection

"Il faut (...) relever un élément qui échappe à une analyse précise. C'est l'influence qu'on eue les innombrables contacts personnels que la Conférence de La Haye a permis d'établir entre les délégués de systèmes juridiques et de formations très diverses. Deux à trois semaines de travail en commun créent une atmosphère favorable non seulement pour l'élaboration de conventions, mais également pour la compréhension de mentalités et de conceptions juridiques étrangères. Cette évolution des esprits dans un sens internationaliste se répercutera à toutes sortes d'occasions.»¹

I. Introduction

This document aims to propose a brief complementary report regarding the Draft Convention on Co-operation and Access to Justice for International Tourists to be considered in the next Meeting of the Council on General Affairs and Policy, on March, 2015.

In 2012, among the activities of the American Association on Private International Law (ASADIP) and considering the development of tourism services and the increasing of visitors and tourists in the world, 108 experts from more than 14 countries have manifested officially their support to the creation of a document with the objective to protect tourists and visitors internationally. The so called "Declaration of Rio de Janeiro" proposed the accomplishment of studies, under the scope of the Hague Conference on Private International Law, on the cooperation and protection of consumers as tourists considering all vulnerabilities as foreign people, i.e., the short time that they dispose and the circumstances of being away from their culture, language and home country, the need for information, also about the proper venue to complain and to get access to justice, alternative dispute resolution and small claim courts, access to an easy administrative and legal aid without discrimination.

On March 15th, 2013, on the occasion of the World Consumer Rights Day, the Brazilian president released the “National Plan on Consumption and Citizenship”, PLANDEC, which aims the development of policies and actions of consumer defense and protection, especially in the areas of after-sales services, regulated products and tourism. Regarding the specific topic of tourism, PLANDEC has established a series of actions aiming the cooperation and coordination of the subject of consumer protection in the tourism field, involving many governmental actors and, also, the trade. The educational actions in the field of consumption and tourism may be concretely observed in the Annex II, concerning the experience of cooperation among many actors on the occasion of the 2014 World Cup.

In 2013, Brazil presented at the Hague Conference on Private International Law (HCCH) the Draft Convention on Co-operation and Access to Justice for International Tourists, having its text elaborated by the joint studies accomplished by the American Association on Private International Law (ASADIP) and the Federal University of Rio Grande do Sul (UFRGS). The proposal's presentation had as main objective to introduce the issue at Hague Conference, considering the tourism growth and its importance economically, and the necessity to create mechanisms to dispute settlement by administrative and legal cooperation among the countries.

On March, 2014, aiming to develop even more the debate about the issue of international tourist-consumer protection, the Brazilian Ministry of Justice, through the National Secretariat for Consumer alongside the Brazilian Tourism Institute, EMBRATUR, organized the I International Seminar on Consumption and Tourism, when it was launched the book “A Proteção Internacional do Consumidor Turista e Visitante” (The International Protection of Consumer Tourist and Visitor), which reunites articles of experts and authorities of consumer protection and tourism from Australia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, The Netherlands, Peru, Portugal, Switzerland, Uruguay and Consumers International.

The ASADIP have sent a questionnaire to their members about: i) if the Hague Conference would be the proper organization to submit this proposal, ii) the existence of bilateral agreements regarding the subject, and iii) the dialogue of this proposal with the one of UNWTO (Draft Convention on the Protection of Tourists and Tourism Service Providers). The answers were discussed in a multinational working group in the Rio de Janeiro Meeting, in 2014, and the concrete suggestions of the proposal evolution were sent to the Brazilian government, through the Ministry of Justice, and to Latin-American countries' authorities.

On April, 2014, at the Council on General Affairs and Policy of the Hague Conference on Private International, the Brazilian delegation, headed by Ambassador of Brazil at the Hague, Piragibe Tarragô, and composed by members from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Ministry of Justice, Ministry of Tourism and the Office of the Attorney General, has presented once again the motivation to the draft Convention on Co-operation and Access to Justice for International Tourists, presented in 2013, justifying the importance of protecting the consumer as an international economic and security development tool. Considering the *"support received from a significant number of Members, the Council decided to retain this topic on the Agenda of the Hague Conference"*² in order to keep the dialogue with hesitant delegations, clarifying doubts and get new supports.

In 2014, Brazil has been benefited by the visiting of many foreign tourists during the World Cup, creating a pilot project of a Convention that was used by consumer protection authorities in all 12 host cities, under Senacon-MJ coordination, which has made possible the diagnosis of strong and weak aspects of the Draft Convention, as well as has helped to surely decrease the number of problems with foreign tourists during the 2014 World Cup. Likewise, informal previous contacts had been accomplished with partner countries and studies were undertaken by the Ministry of Justice Especial Working Group, coordinated by Professors Claudia Lima Marques (UFRGS) and Nádia de Araújo (PUC-Rio), in order to develop the proposal, overcoming supposed hesitations expressed by the States during previous meetings.

² « The Council noted the proposal on co-operation in respect of protection of tourists and visitors abroad presented in Preliminary Document no. 13 and discussed the possibility to undertake work on this matter. In view of the support received from a significant number of Members, the Council decided to retain this topic on the Agenda of the Hague Conference" <http://www.hcch.net/upload/ar2013.pdf>

A detailed report of the Draft Convention evolution and its multiple language complaint form, which has been improved after its massive use during the World Cup to allow the communication among the foreign tourists and the local consumer protection authorities, presented below.

The present document aims to clarify doubts pointed out during the last Council meeting, on April 2014, such as: the motivation to the existence of a tourist consumer protection mechanism; the relevance of the Hague Conference on Private International Law to discuss and to develop the issue instead of other organizations as the United National World Tourism Organization (UNWTO).

The idea is that the international tourist shall be assisted, through the already established costumer service in the member States, both at its destination and at its home country. This cooperation system among legal and administrative bodies would provide a more effective protection at both tourist consumers' visited countries and countries of origin, avoiding expensive and ineffective international demands.

This complementary document will be summarized as follows:

II. The work of the Hague Conference on access to Justice and networks of judicial cooperation and how the proposal is part of the Hague Conference scope of work

- a. Adequacy of the forum of the Hague Conference for the development of negotiations on a global framework for the tourist consumer protection
- b. The expertise of the Hague Conference on international legal cooperation and access to justice

II. The work of the Hague Conference on access to Justice and networks of judicial cooperation and the protection of consumers and how the Brazilian proposal is part of the Hague Conference scope of work

Considering the needs of the international traveler, of the global citizen, and especially considering that the great mission of The Hague Conference on Private International Law is to facilitate people's lives, the access to justice³ swiftly and without excessive costs is something essential today.

The proposal presented and defended, not only for Brazil focuses on private international law and the administrative and judicial cooperation. The main idea is to make use of systems and authorities established in the countries⁴. Applying the principle of non-discrimination, not just help, but guarantee the rights of tourist consumers, consequently providing security in the tourism sector and ensuring access to justice and administrative help for tourists internationally. The data from the international organizations only show year after year the growth of this sector, especially considering the participation in the international market of countries like Brazil, Russia, China, India and South Africa. The growth of tourism flow worldwide is increasing and, considering the various types of tourism (business, leisure, study, migration) is irreversible. Therefore, it is extremely relevant and important to create a legal instrument to facilitate consumer disputes. It is necessary to ensure that tourists have access to justice, access to information and, therefore, that they have easier access to a network of bodies that ensure the protection of those consumers.

The experience of the Brazilian government within MERCOSUR in receiving demands and knowledge of demands within this market that motivated a lot for the elaboration of the Convention proposal presented in the Private International Law Hague Conference.

The idea of presenting a draft convention was precisely to show the commitment to the theme, seeking an improvement through the support not only of each member of the HCCH, but mostly the Conference of expertise in the development of this type of document and in establishing such cooperation. The experience of the Hague Conference on access to Justice and the development of judicial cooperation networks makes the forum not only appropriate, but the most relevant to the development of a focused Convention on the protection of tourist consumers.

a. Adequacy of the forum of the Hague Conference for the development of negotiations on a global framework for the tourist consumer protection

The Hague Conference brings together more than 70 countries and has among the countries that negotiated and signed their conventions more than 125 countries, being a global forum of cooperation in civil and commercial matters, represented on every continent and allowing dialogue between common law countries and civil law countries, Islamic and secular countries, large integration processes, such as the European Union one and developing countries, in order to progress in the protection of individuals, families and world trade. The mission of this intergovernmental organization is the progressive unification of private international law. (Art. 1 of the Statute of the Private International Law Hague Conference).

Since its founding in 1893, the Hague Conference has already produced more than 45 instruments, a great part of them are conventions, but also principles, most of them on the issue of child protection in the area of family and inheritance (23 conventions), but also on disputes and international legal co-operation developed 10 conventions, as well as in trade and international finances, 10 conventions. The Convention's review process of July 15, 1955 on the law applied to international sales, produced a project of 10 articles on consumer sale contracts (approved in the 14 session of the Council in 1980), which served as an inspiration for many consumer protection rules in Europe (Rome Convention 1980, Rome I Regulation) and in the Americas (Civil Code of Quebec, the new Civil and Commercial Code of Argentina approved in 2014), as well as many of its conventions can be used on the protection of consumers (Products Liability, 1973) and tourists (Convention on Access to Justice, 1980).

Unlike the UNWTO, which is a forum of states in dialogue with the tourist service providers and interested in the harmonization of standards and substantive practices and materials in terms of tourist services, the Hague Conference is a forum for States with experts and non governmental organizations specialized in private international law and international legal cooperation, that tries to overcome the lack of global substantive standards for the protection of tourists, especially in its civil, consumption and trade relations.

The Hague Conference has expertise in dealing with issues related to the international legal cooperation when it is necessary to have a networking involving the figure of the central authorities. In recent years, it was highlighted for its post-conventional work, when promotes regular meetings to verify the great progress of your documents. Thus, it assists the various networks to stay in touch, they elaborated forms for the development of the communication, and thus to provide the appropriate assistance to the private parties.

Besides its working methods, in which a subject performs several steps to become a global nature document, is undoubtedly the proper format to address the issue. These steps, beginning with studies on the feasibility of the proposal, the composition of expert groups to discuss the beginning of the work and subsequently the negotiations on special committees with the participation of all member states and observer states, have the function to help in the elaboration of an international document that reflects the needs of its members.

If the subject matter of the tourist consumer protection will be included in the agenda of the Hague Conference, its renowned Permanent Bureau could prepare an in-depth study of the comparative law and the feasibility of the proposal, and then it could establish a working group to start the works on negotiation, through the elaboration of a first text, from what has already been presented, approaching it from other agreements or non-binding instruments already produced by the Conference and its member countries.

There is no doubt that a draft Convention for the Protection of the Tourist Consumers and Visitors fall within the scope of work of the Hague Conference. After all the Conference's mission is "to be a forum of members to the development and implementation of common rules of private international law, in order to coordinate the relations between different legal systems in international situations." It is also objective of the Conference, to promote judicial and administrative cooperation in the areas of civil and commercial law.

b. The expertise of the Hague Conference on international legal cooperation and access to justice

It's great the specialization of the Hague Conference is vastly specialized on international legal cooperation, particularly in civil and commercial law issues, with various conventions using the figure of the central authority to facilitate the communication and the joint implementation of tasks in cases of conflict and problems that cross borders⁵.

Moreover, that the Hague Conference on Private International Law is world *"renowned for the quality of its scientific works and the development of universally acceptable solutions"*⁶ for over 100 years.

Among the international forums that deal with global unification, which does not distinguish the participating States by reason of any aspect, whether geographic, economic, political, social or religious, we just have the Hague Conference on Private International Law as "an universal forum par excellence". This universality is observed in concern for the unification of private international law regardless the subject⁷.

Considering the expertise of The Hague Conference that is a center of experts and delegates from all over the world, engaged with the spirit of working together, also makes the Hague an appropriate forum for the discussion and the elaboration of the document that will protect tourist consumers.

III. Differences in the UNWTO proposal and the dialogue with other already established conventions

During the meetings of the Hague Conference on Private International Law on April 2014, one of the subjects raised to debate was the existence of two proposed conventions having the international tourism as the main aspect, generically and in a broader sense: the draft Convention in respect of the Protection of Consumers, formally presented at the Hague Conference on Private International Law (HCCH) to be included in the future working agenda of this forum of legal international cooperation and the draft UNWTO Convention regarding the protection of tourists and tourism services providers, which is being elaborated by the Working Group on the protection of tourists/consumers and travel organizers at the United National World Tourism Organization (UNWTO), already in its third draft.

In order to answer any doubts related to the differences between the draft conventions, their subject, objective and forums, it was elaborated a document (Annex III) by the experts working group coordinated by the Brazilian Ministry of Justice, counting on the collaboration of the Professor Claudia Lima Marques (UFRGS) and Nádia de Araújo (PUC-Rio)

IV. Final remarks: the new draft Convention on Co-operation and Access to Justice for International Tourists

The proposal main objectives still being the same as established by the first draft, which are the formation of a global network to protect foreign tourists as consumers, allowing them to use the visited country's consumer protection and legal services, without discrimination. As indicated by the new title, it was only given more emphasis for access to justice and for ex ante cooperation by the use of alternative dispute resolution at the visited country by the foreign tourist. The section regarding international cooperation among the countries was specified and summarized, as in the section regarding central authorities, with clean and clear text.

The new draft (Annex I) is more clear in its definitions, now using only the expression 'international tourists' (and not tourists and visitors abroad any more) and it highlights the importance of the multiple language complaint form, easier to handle, making possible to the international tourist fill out the form in its mother language and to report the problem to the visited country's authority.

The draft convention remains with 9 articles, ensuring also the dialogue with other conventions, but it was not yet complemented with general stile rules of the Hague Conference.

The idea to present a draft Convention in respect to the protection of international tourists was surely to demonstrate the commitment with the issue, therefore it is not a final document and nor already finished, but it is aimed to establish a starting point, and to be worked alongside with other HCCH members, considering its expertise.

As can be seen from the 9 (nine) drafted articles, the main objective is to establish cooperation channels through legal cooperation, i.e., facilitating the access to small claim courts and establishing a legal and administrative cooperation system, as settled by the Regulation N. 2006/2004 of the European Parliament. This would make possible for the tourist to complain in the visited country, with the form in its native language, be assisted by consumer defense authorities of that country, even having little time, have the solution of its problem through mediation and conciliation (alternative dispute resolution) as the tourist was a resident, fill the complaint up to two weeks after, count on the support of these authorities and – if the problem could not be solved by the visiting country authorities – count on the cooperation of the authorities in its home country or, at least, with a public document about the problem that happened and the efforts that were taken to solve the issue.

The proposal merits are to use the system already established in the countries, and to better organize them to international cases, avoiding the tourist discrimination on the access to justice and to alternative dispute resolution – where it still with little international cooperation and use, as it can be seen in small claim courts - , and also make available the multiple language complaint form, adapted to online environment, in order to facilitate report of the problem to national authorities, which know the providers and would put efforts to the tourist problem solving, avoiding unfeasible and inefficient international litigations and personal frustration.

MINISTÉRIO DA JUSTIÇA
SECRETARIA NACIONAL DO CONSUMIDOR
GABINETE DA SECRETÁRIA

The proposal takes into account the tourist consumers' vulnerability⁸, considering the time spent in the visiting country, the language, lack of specific information or even of ease access, and the difficulties when a consumption conflict is settled in foreign country. Even though there's any access to international justice, in practice, it is financially unfeasible considering the costs involved, for instance hiring a legal representative in other country. The proposal of a convention regarding tourist consumer protection aims the establishment of a multilateral global cooperation instrument of authorities and access to justice⁹, by which the countries would apply its own consumer protection and defense law. Such cooperation would use the already established authorities and instruments (institutions, legal and administrative authorities), therefore facilitating the ex ante cooperation and understanding the possibility to the tourist to complain to the visiting country authorities, even after returning to its home country, improving tourist protection and providing the possibility to use alternative dispute resolution, without discrimination.

The importance of tourist consumer issue under the last international events – The World Cup

WORLD CUP LESSONS

Aiming the implementation of actions regarding Consumer Protection during the 2014 World Cup, the National Secretariat for Consumers, Senacon, developed the Integrated Center for Tourist Consumer Protection. Established in the scope of the Consumption and Tourism Technical Committee, of the National Observatory for Consumer Relations, the Center provided the integration between federal agencies, local authorities and market representatives.

The objective of the Integrated Center action was to monitor eventual consumption conflicts in the host cities during the football World Cup, by the previously dialogue achieved with the Local Technical Chambers for Tourist Consumer Protection, as well as solve national and international eventual demands that require an intervention of federal agencies.

There was no significant consumption demand registered in the local level, and the few ones registered were briefly solved due to the previously dialog implemented.

However, internationally there were two cases referring to consumption of major gravity registered. The first one was related to the North American enterprise Dynamics Airways, which has repeatedly failed to comply with Brazilian law and regulation, being obligated to withdraw its aircrafts from Brazil by the action of the National Civil Aviation Agency, responsible technical body and member of the Integrated Center. The second case occurred between Tesoro Tours, a Colombian tourism company, and consumers from that country, whom had no hotel reservation for the entire contracted period in the cities of Brasília, Cuiabá and Rio de Janeiro, neither airport shuttle service to hotels, as well as problems regarding air tickets. This case was only solved due to the joint and the coordinated action between the Integrated Center and the Superintendence of Industry and Commerce (SIC), the Colombian consumer protection body, the Brazilian local consumer protection bodies, the National Secretariat for Consumer (SENACON) and FIFA.

About the Integrated Center, it must also be emphasized the important work previously done articulated between the members of the Consumption and Tourism Technical Committee, whom held a series of meetings in the 12 host cities. Realized between 2013 and 2014, those meetings were attended by consumer defense and tourism local authorities, market representatives, and members of the Committee. The meetings primary objective was the development of an articulated space between the mentioned bodies, as an example of the articulation existing in the federal sphere promoted by the Committee, considering the importance of each member in each area. Meetings were also held in which the actions taken were presented by each member of the committee to the representatives of the host cities.

In addition to the actions related to the Consumption and Tourism Technical Committee and to the Integrated Center for Tourist Consumer Protection, the National Secretariat for Consumer sought rapprochement and coordination with agencies for consumer protection of other countries, showing that the Secretariat was open to the dialogue and to the cooperation.

Preoccupied with domestic and international consumers who would be moving during the World Cup, the Senacon produced, in partnership with the Brazilian Tourism Institute - EMBRATUR, the Guide of the Tourist Consumer, a trilingual material that aiming to clarify the main questions regarding consumer, also provide the main emergency numbers in Brazil, useful apps for travelers, telephone numbers and the addresses of local consumer protection bodies, Procons, available in the host cities. This material, was distributed in Brazil, and has been shared with several countries, including its digital version, with the goal to inform about Consumer Law in Brazil, to international citizens and other governments.

The work done by the Secretariat, in partnership with other members of the Brazilian government and with the other actors working in the area of consumer protection and tourism, proves that a previous joint to the problems of consumption contributes a lot to the effectiveness of protective actions and consumer protection, significantly decreasing the occurrence of consumer demands, as well as providing a quick and effective solution to any problem related to the consumer Law, especially in the area of tourism services.

ANNEX III

Differences in the UNWTO proposal and the dialogue with other already established conventions

COMPARATIVE ANALYSIS BETWEEN THE CONVENTIONS PROPOSED
AT THE HAGUE CONFERENCE ON INTERNATIONAL PRIVATE LAW
(HCCH) AND AT THE UNITED NATIONS WORLD TOURISM
ORGANIZATION (UNWTO)

During the meetings of the Hague Conference on Private International Law on April 2014, one of the subjects raised to debate was the existence of two proposed conventions having the international tourism as the main aspect, generically and in a broader sense: the draft Convention in respect of the Protection of Consumers, formally presented at the Hague Conference on Private International Law (HCCH) and the draft UNWTO Convention regarding the protection of tourists and tourism services providers, which is being elaborated by the Working Group on the protection of tourists/consumers and travel organizers at the United National World Tourism Organization (UNWTO), already in its third draft.

The Technical Note and its justification both presented with the draft Convention in respect of the Protection of Consumers, present elements and have concluded that it is pertinent to create a legal instrument to protect consumers outside their country of origin. Such elements, in the contextualization of 2013, point out the growth of international tourism, as well as to the advance of such sector in Brazil as a result of the international situation at the time. However, the proposal's ideal is to be global in its scope, not regional, in order to widely embrace the tourists as consumers.

Noticing the titles of the proposals it is already possible to see that they target individuals are different. The proposal presented at the Hague seeks to protect the rights of vulnerable individuals ex ante, in other words, international tourists who are outside their country of residence, making use of the consumer protection system in the country visited, thus avoiding costly and inefficient international litigations (ex post) on consumer issues. The UNWTO proposal aims to standardize the rules of national law and to protect ex post not specifically the individual rights of tourists, but a category, through measures that protect the interests of tourism services providers, in other words, commercial interests, especially in cases of emergency (environmental and nuclear disasters in Annex I, II and III, and travel agents bankruptcy in Annex II)¹⁰.

It is also necessary to clarify that the objectives of the forums where the aforementioned conventions were proposed are different, hence the bringing of two conventions of different objects and legal natures in two different forums. The Hague Conference on Private International Law¹¹, as its very name, addresses relevant topics to the Private International Law, being suitable for the discussion of issues and documents, including proposals for convention, committing signatory countries to the protection of individual rights in the context of private international law, in other words, conflicts of laws and international legal cooperation. The World Tourism Organization¹², part of the United Nations, is a forum for tourism services providers, defending commercial interests of companies of its member countries.

Dissonant element between the two proposals is also the form of protection effectiveness being undertaken. The UNWTO proposal is strongly based on the so-called "best practices" (art. 6), which are indicative conducts for tourism services providers (especially travel agencies, Annex II) of the member States, i.e., without any coercive force and mandatory standards (art. 5) for the action of the States on protection of the tourists (assistance, Appendix I), but only in some cases of force majeure or emergency. Regarding the HCCH draft Convention, the characteristic feature of it is to be addressed to the Competent Authorities and the Central Authorities of the member States, making possible to directly protect tourists regarding their demands as consumers. in an international legal cooperation of all administrative agencies of consumer protection (art. 6) and judicial cooperation, including small claims courts, today little used in the protection of international tourists.

¹⁰ These annexes refer to the UNWTO Convention on the protection of tourists and tourism service providers.

Another differing aspect of the analyzed proposals is the market niches covered for resolving disputes. In the HCCH proposal, consumer relations can be the object of any market niche that has a direct relation with the consumer, thereby importing a general protection for consumers in foreign lands. The UNWTO proposal focuses on the protection to be offered by its convention in the relation between the consumer and only the market niches directly involved with tourism, expressly excluding the involvement of transport companies, whether by air, sea, road or rail, as asserted the art. 1º, paragraph 3, in the latest draft of the UNWTO proposal.

Regarding the implementation of the proposed convention at HCCH, it counts on the expertise of the Conference on building global networks organized by Central Authorities¹³, even as a way to increase the so-called International Legal Cooperation, an own goal of the Hague Conference. The draft Convention in respect of the Protection of Consumers forecasts the performance of the Central Authority figure (art. 4) and the Competent Authorities (art. 5) to be designated by the member State. In the UNWTO proposal, it was not established, until the present version, a specific name for a similar figure, it only mentions that the State that approves the convention will indicate necessary information and details of authorities and national agencies chosen to be part of this assignment, thus allowing the transfer of this information to other signatory countries of the Convention (annex I, Ch. 2, section 2.6).

The production of periodic reports to analyze the effectiveness of the conventions and possible improvements is a constant element in both proposals. Thus, it is shown a concern about the quality control of the service offered by these conventions, including the possibility of continuous improvement of the same operations.

Therefore, when analyzing the proposed convention of the World Tourism Organization (UNWTO) and the proposal submitted to the Hague Conference on Private International Law (HCCH), it can be stated that, although they are proposals on international tourism, the approaches of the protection offered by both are different and their purposes and nature are complementary and it does not constitute any form of protection overlapping.

The Hague Conference on Private International Law is the ideal forum for the discussion and development of the draft of a convention on tourist consumer protection, improving it by the working methodology within the Conference. It is precisely this approach that allows member States to take part in the deciding process, either by experience in establishing mechanisms of International Legal Cooperation and the participation of central authorities, either because of their expertise in the regulation of private international law.

Please note that the proposals are independent, but complementary in the aspect of the development of the tourism sector, because while one protects tourists ex post in an event of force majeure or distress and regulate the interests of tourism services providers (with repatriation, accommodation, etc); the other intends to protect consumers, vulnerable part of the business relation, ex ante, avoiding economic damage. Furthermore, by allowing the consumer protection system of the country visited work on negotiating consumer rights dispute and the use of courts of small claims by tourists, can also provide a safe and healthy environment for tourist relations on consumption, promoting, in turn, the confidence and the development of the tourism sector as a whole.

Finally, it is important to consider that the present draft convention, considering its objective, would not be presented to UNIDROIT, which is the organization of substantive unification (national material law about international civil procedure and contracts), with the objective to modernize, harmonize and coordinate private law, more specifically, the commercial law among States, elaborating unified law instruments, principals and unified rules. UNIDROIT, which is an observer member at the Hague Conference, has already expressed for the co-existence to the proposed model to deal with the theme, through its current Director at the meeting of the Council in 2012.

It can be noted that UNIDROIT has already tried to unify a theme related to tourism service provision through a Convention regarding travel contracts (1970)¹⁴, which has accomplished a limited success¹⁵. The 1970 Convention related to travel contracts, which has 63 member States¹⁶, was ratified by only six countries, having Belgium and Argentina denouncing it, since it is a Convention of unification with substantive rules that restricts the responsibility – in general – from tourists contracts with travel agencies and allows the consumer arbitration, the consumer protection laws of both countries and the European Directives have imposed the protection, in consumer and civil law, as superior. The convention, however, was historically important, once it has ensured information rights to consumers and has regulated the figure of intermediaries and travel organizers, influencing the development of the theme in the world since 1970.

MINISTÉRIO DA JUSTIÇA
SECRETARIA NACIONAL DO CONSUMIDOR

Therefore, according to the above mentioned explanations it is of great importance to increase the dialogue with the intention of keeping the subject of the protection of tourists and visitors as consumers on the Hague Conference on Private International Law agenda as well as the realization of a project of common convention for the countries of this international organization.
