Questionnaire on Protection Orders and their Recognition and Enforcement (REPO)

I. Background

- 1 At its 2026 meeting, the Council on General Affairs and Policy (CGAP) resumed discussions on a possible new instrument on the cross-border recognition and enforcement of protection orders (REPO), and adopted the following Conclusions and Decisions (C&D):
 22. Welcoming the proposal from the United Kingdom, CGAP mandated the establishment of a Working Group on a potential future convention on cross-border recognition and enforcement of protection orders (REPO).
 23. This Working Group will build on previous work by the PB in 2011-2018 and the Experts' Group in 2014 and further explore the feasibility of, and initially develop policy aims for, a potential future convention on REPO. The Working Group will report to CGAP 2027.
 24. To facilitate the work of the Working Group, CGAP mandated the PB to:
 - a. update its 2012 Questionnaire with a view to collecting information from Member States on civil protection orders available in their States and laws applicable available in their States for cross-border recognition and enforcement of protection orders;
 - b. circulate this Questionnaire in June 2026 and request responses by the end of September 2026.
 25. CGAP further mandated the PB to make arrangements for an in-person Working Group meeting with the possibility for online participation, ahead of CGAP 2027. CGAP thanked the United Kingdom for its offer to host this Working Group meeting including to cover travel costs for HCCH staff, and supports this proposal.¹

II. Introductory Note to the Questionnaire

- 2 The present document comprises the updated Questionnaire requested by CGAP.
- 3 The sole purpose of this Questionnaire is to gather factual and comparative information on the existence, scope, and operation of protection orders, including their recognition and enforcement in cross-border situations. The questions are designed to support informed discussions by providing a clearer picture of national, regional and international frameworks and practices. The Questionnaire deliberately takes a broad approach (e.g., in terms of the kinds of orders that could be in scope), in order to maximise information-gathering for that purpose. This is not intended to pre-empt or prejudice any policy decisions that may be taken regarding a potential future instrument in this area, including its scope and content.
- 4 Therefore, for the purposes of this Questionnaire, the term “protection order” may refer to any measure taken by a competent authority requiring a person to refrain from doing, or to carry out, specified acts to protect one or more identified persons. The term is used in a broad sense and may include orders issued in civil, administrative, or other proceedings, irrespective of the authority by which they are issued, provided that their primary purpose is protective and not punitive.

- 5 Given that States may have different classifications for protection orders (civil, criminal, administrative, other), respondents are invited to adopt a functional approach when answering this Questionnaire. Respondents are encouraged to provide hyperlinks to useful online resources pertaining to their national systems.
- 6 This Questionnaire focuses primarily on orders issued for the protection of adults. Where relevant, respondents may also include orders issued to protect children and indicate this clearly in their responses.

III. Instructions to Complete the Questionnaire

- 7 To allow the PB to extract parts of the Questionnaire for compilation of the responses, you are kindly requested to use this Word Version of the document, and not to return a PDF version of the completed Questionnaire.
- 8 You are kindly requested to send your completed Questionnaire to the PB by e-mail to < secretariat@hcch.net > no later than 11 September 2026, 5.00 p.m. CEST with the following indication in the subject line of the e-mail:
“REPO - Questionnaire Response [name of State]”.
- 9 Please address any questions you may have on this Questionnaire to < secretariat@hcch.net >.
- 10 The PB intends, except where indicated otherwise or where expressly asked not to do so, to place all responses to the questionnaire on the HCCH website (www.hcch.net). Please, therefore, clearly identify any responses which should not be placed on the website.

I. Protection orders under domestic law: scope and main features

A. Types of behaviours required / prohibited by protection orders

1.	What types of protection orders are available in your jurisdiction? Tick all boxes that apply. Provide additional details where appropriate. ☒ Prohibiting communication with or contacting the protected person(s): Sweden: Covered by the most common type of non-contact order, an ordinary non-contact order EU: At EU level, Directive (EU) 2024/1385 on combatting violence against women and domestic violence provides that EU Member States should ensure that emergency barring orders, restraining orders and protection orders are available under national law to provide effective protection for victims and their dependants. These three types of orders may prohibit or regulate some of the conducts ticked in this question (refer to art. 19, recitals 43-47, and the corresponding articles 52 and 53 of the Istanbul Convention, and art. 16(2) and (5), recitals 38 - 42). Link to the Directive: https://eur-lex.europa.eu/legal-content/EN/TXT/PDF/?uri=OJ:L_202401385&qid=1716884102079 More information is also provided below in q. 3 in Section C (Part I) in question 20 in Section F (Part III) . ☒ Prohibiting approaching or being in physical proximity to the protected person(s): Sweden: Covered by the most common type of non-contact order, an ordinary non-contact order ☒ Prohibiting harassment (incl. any kind of non-physical forms of abuse): Sweden: Covered by the most common type of non-contact order, an ordinary non-contact order ☒ Prohibiting stalking: Sweden: Covered by the most common type of non-contact order, an ordinary non-contact order ☒ Prohibiting or restricting certain social media / online activity: Sweden: Covered by the most common type of non-contact order, an ordinary non-contact order. Such a non-contact order prohibits a person from visiting or in any other way contacting another person or following him or her. The legislation is technology neutral and thus applies to contacts made through social media or otherwise online. ☒ Prohibiting taking someone abroad:

	Sweden: An exit ban may be issued for a child (a person under 18) to prevent him/her from being taken abroad/leaving the country. The exit ban can be used to protect a child from a harmful stay abroad. ☐ Prohibiting taking someone abroad and abandoning them there: Please insert text here ☐ Prohibiting certain physical or medical interventions affecting the bodily integrity of a person: Please insert text here ☒ Requiring a person to stay away from a specified place (e.g. home, workplace, school): Sweden: Covered by more extensive types of non-contact orders: (a) an expanded non-contact order, (b) a special expanded non-contact order and (c) a non-contact order for the joint home. ☐ Requiring a person to participate in counselling: Please insert text here ☐ Restricting possession or use of weapons: Please insert text here ☐ Imposing other prohibitions (please specify): Please insert text here ☐ Imposing positive obligations of a protective nature (please specify): Please insert text here ☒ Other (please specify): Sweden: An interim injunction prohibiting the spouses from visiting each other may be issued during a divorce procedure to prohibit spouses from visiting each other during the proceedings until the division of property has taken place. Corresponding rules exist for cohabiting couples who separate. This does not necessarily respond to any threatening behaviour. It may be granted on request from one of the spouses/cohabitees and applies to both spouses/cohabitees. A removal ban may be issued to prohibit a custodian to remove a child in care from a foster home.

B. Contexts / situations or wider risks / behaviours that can be addressed by a protection order

2.	What types of contexts / situations or wider risks / behaviours can be addressed by a protection order issued in your jurisdiction? Tick all boxes that apply. Provide additional details where appropriate. ☒ Domestic or family violence / abuse:² EU: Article 1(2) of Directive (EU) 2024/1385 provides that its Chapters 3 to 7 apply to all victims of offences of violence against women and domestic violence, regardless of their gender. Such victims are all the victims of acts criminalised under Chapter 2 (Offences concerning sexual exploitation of women and children and computer crime) and victims of any other acts of violence against women or domestic violence, as criminalised under other Union legal acts or under national law. While protection orders must be available for the crimes under Chapter 2 in accordance with art. 19(2) of the Directive, there are other crimes under national law for which protection orders must exist. This is further clarified in recital 9, which provides that the Directive's provisions on victims' rights apply to all victims of violence against women or domestic violence criminalised under Union or national law. This includes the offences specifically criminalised by the Directive, such as FGM and forced marriage, as well as other relevant offences under Union or national law, including rape, femicide, stalking and sexual harassment.

As regards honour-related violence, the Directive treats it as an aggravating circumstance for the offences in Chapter II, rather than as a separate offence. It therefore does not, in itself, trigger the obligation to provide protection orders. However, where honour-related violence constitutes a criminal offence under national law, it can be considered an "act of violence covered by the Directive". In such cases, Article 19(1) applies and Member States must ensure that protection orders are available

Directive (EU) 2024/1385 also provides examples of behaviours and risks that may be addressed by a protection order (refer to Article 16 and recitals 38 - 42).

☒ Other contexts / situations or wider risks / behaviours (please specify):

Sweden: A non-contact order can be issued if there, due to certain circumstances, is a risk that the person against whom the non-contact order is issued (1) will commit crimes against, follow, improperly surveil, or in another way seriously harass the person whom the non-contact order is supposed to protect, or (2) will expose the protected person to influence in order to deter him or her from submitting information to a court or a law enforcement authority.

An interim injunction prohibiting spouses from visiting each other during the divorce proceedings or when cohabiting couples separate is primarily responding to the need of the requesting spouse to be left at peace during the procedure. Hence, it does not necessarily respond to any threatening behaviour of the other spouse.

A removal ban to prohibit a custodian to remove a child from a foster home serves to protect a child in care from risk of harm by being separated too suddenly from the foster home. The main purpose is to allow for a slower and more gentle reunion with the custodians.

C. Legal basis for protection orders

3. What is the legal basis enabling authorities in your jurisdiction to issue the protection orders listed in Question 1 above?

There are four types of non-contact orders:

(a) An ordinary non-contact order, which prohibits the prohibited person from visiting, following or contacting the protected person. (Section 1 of the Non-Contact Orders Act)

(b) An expanded non-contact order, which in addition to the prohibitions described in (a) also prohibits the prohibited person from visiting an area around the protected person's home, workplace or another place where the protected person usually stays. (Section 2 of the Non-Contact Orders Act)

(c) A special expanded non-contact order, which in addition to the prohibitions described in (a) and (b) prohibits the prohibited person from visiting a larger area around the protected person's home, workplace or another place where the protected person usually stays. (Section 2 a of the Non-Contact Orders Act)

(d) A non-contact order for the joint home, which in addition to the prohibitions described in (a) also prohibits the prohibited person from visiting a joint home. (Section a b of the Non-Contact Orders Act)

An interim injunction prohibiting the spouses from visiting each other during divorce proceedings is based on Chapter 14, § 7, Marriage Code (1987:230) https://www.riksdagen.se/sv/dokument-och-lagar/dokument/svensk-forfattningssamling/aktenskapsbalk-1987230_sfs-1987-230/. EU: Article 19 of Directive (EU) 2024/1385 provides, in particular, that Member States must ensure that:

- Emergency barring orders can be issued by competent authorities granted power to issue them, without undue delay in situations of immediate danger, requiring the alleged offender to leave the victim's residence and prohibiting them from returning, approaching the residence or workplace, or contacting the victim or dependants. These orders must take immediate effect and must not depend on the victim reporting the offence or on the completion of an individual risk assessment (art. 19(1))

	• Restraining orders or protection orders may be issued by competent authorities granted power to issue them to protect victims for as long as necessary (art. 19(2)). • National law may require that, where the victim is an adult, such orders are issued upon the victim's request (art. 19(3)). • Victims are informed of the possibility to obtain these orders and, where relevant, of the possibility to seek their cross-border recognition under Directive 2011/99/EU (European Protection Order) or Regulation (EU) No 606/2013 (civil protection measures) (art. 19(4)). • Breaches of any of these three types of orders are subject to effective, proportionate and dissuasive penalties, and may trigger a review of the victim's individual risk assessment referred to in Art. 16 (art. 19(5)). • Victims have the opportunity to be notified without undue delay of breaches that may affect their safety (art. 19(6)). • Member States remain free to classify these orders under criminal, civil or administrative law, as the Directive does not require changes to national legal systems (art. 19(7)). The substantive equivalent of Article 19 of the Directive is found in Articles 52 (Emergency barring orders) and 53 (Restraining or protection orders) of the Istanbul Convention. The Directive largely transposes these obligations into EU law but strengthens them by introducing procedural safeguards, victim information obligations, notification requirements, links to risk assessment, and—most notably—the cross-border recognition and enforcement mechanisms available within the EU under Directive 2011/99/EU and Regulation (EU) No 606/2013. Directive (EU) 2024/1385 in its article 16 on "Early individual assessment" requires Member States to ensure that at the earliest possible stage, such as when the victim first comes into contact with the competent authorities, or as soon as possible thereafter, the victim's specific protection needs are identified through an individual assessment. Where appropriate, the assessment should be carried out in cooperation with all relevant competent authorities. The objective is to identify, without delay, whether the victim requires specific protective measures. (art. 16(2) and recital 38 which clarifies that this assessment may even take place before a formal criminal complaint has been lodged or on the initiative of the authorities where a third party reports the violence). Article 16(5) requires Member States to ensure that the findings of the individual assessment are translated into appropriate and proportionate protection measures. Competent authorities must take measures corresponding to the risks identified in the assessment. These may include: • special protection measures during criminal proceedings under Articles 23 and 24 of the Victims' Rights Directive (Directive 2012/29/EU) (art. 16(5)(a)); • the granting of emergency barring orders, restraining orders or protection orders under Article 19 of the Directive, where necessary to safeguard the victim (art. 16(5)(b)); and • other measures aimed at managing the behaviour of the offender or suspect, including intervention programmes referred to in Article 37 (art. 16(5)(c)). More information is also provided in question 20 in Section F (Part III). ☐ Administrative regulations / instruments: Please insert text here ☐ Other sources (e.g., case law; please specify): Please insert text here

D. Type(s) of authorities that may issue protection orders

4.	Which authorities are competent to issue protection orders in your jurisdiction? Tick all boxes that apply.

	Provide additional details where appropriate. ☒ Judicial authorities (please specify): ☒ Civil court / tribunal: Sweden: An interim injunction prohibiting the spouses from visiting each other during a divorce procedure or when cohabitees separate is issued by the District Court. ☒ Criminal court / tribunal: Sweden: A non-contact order may be issued by a prosecutor. A party that is discontent with a prosecutor's decision to issue, or not issue, a non-contact order has the right to a review of the decision by the District Court. ☒ Administrative authorities (please specify): ☒ Administrative tribunal: Sweden: The Administrative Court decide on exit bans and removal bans based on the Care of Young persons (Special Provisions) Act after an application from the social welfare committee. The social welfare committee may decide on temporary exit and removal bans, but the decisions must be submitted to the Administrative Court for confirmation. ☐ Police / law enforcement officer: Please insert text here ☐ Other (please specify): Please insert text here ☐ Other authorities (please specify): EU: Directive (EU) 2024/1385 does not designate a specific competent authority to issue protection orders. Recital 14 provides that for the purposes of this Directive, 'competent authorities' should be understood to be the authority or authorities designated under national law as competent to carry out a duty as provided for in this Directive. Each Member State should determine which authorities are to be competent for each of those dutiesPlease insert text here. Article 19 of the Directive simply requires Member States to ensure that the competent authorities are granted the power the issue emergency barring orders, restraining orders and protection orders.

E. Protected person(s)

5.	Who can be protected by a protection order issued in your jurisdiction? Tick all boxes that apply. Provide additional details where appropriate. ☒ Intended protected person(s) only: ☒ Adults (please indicate minimum age requirement if applicable): Sweden: An interim injunction prohibiting the spouses from visiting each other during a divorce procedure or when cohabitees separate applies to both spouses. EU: Directive (EU) 2024/1385 offers protection to all persons - adults, children and dependants, regardless of their gender (art. 2 and recital 12). ☒ Children (please indicate age limit if applicable): EU: Directive (EU) 2024/1385 provides that a child means any person below the age of 18 years (art. 2(f)).

	Sweden: Children can be protected by exit bans and removal bans based on the Care of Young Persons (Special Provisions) Act. ☒ Other individuals close to the intended protected person(s) (please specify): Sweden: A non-contact order may only be issued in respect of one protected person. Thus, if there is a risk that the person whom the order is issued against commits a crime against an individual close to the intended protected person, a non-contact order protecting the other individual may be issued as well. EU: The Directive also provides that a 'dependant' can be protected by a protection order. It should be understood to mean a child of the victim or any person, other than the offender or suspect, who lives in the same household as the victim and for whom the victim provides care and support (art. 2(g)).

F. Applicant(s)

6.	Who can apply for a protection order in your jurisdiction? Tick all boxes that apply. ☒ The intended protected person(s) ☒ Family member(s) of the intended protected person(s) ☒ Police / law enforcement officers ☐ Courts ex officio ☒ Other person, public authority or official (please specify): Sweden: The intended protected person may apply for a non-contact order. However, a prosecutor may also initiate a non-contact order if there is a reason for it. Such a reason may be that family, a social worker etc. informs the prosecutor or the police of the need of a non-contact order. Only the divorcing spouses can apply for an interim injunction prohibiting the spouses from visiting each other based on the Marriage Code. Only the separating spouses can apply for an interim injunction prohibiting the spouses från visiting each other based on the Cohabitees Act. The social welfare committee is a politically appointed committee responsible for the social services in the municipality. The social welfare committee can apply for exit bans and removal bans based on the Care of Young persons (Special Provisions) Act to the Administrative Court. EU: Directive (EU) 2024/1385 provides that where the victim is an adult, EU Member States, may require, in accordance with their national law, that emergency barring orders, restraining orders and protection orders as provided for in paragraphs 1 and 2 of art. 19 be issued at the request of the victim (art. 19(3)).

G. Person(s) against whom protective orders can be issued

7.	Against whom can a protection order be issued in your jurisdiction? Tick all boxes that apply ☒ Perpetrator(s) / alleged perpetrator(s) / putative perpetrator(s) / person(s) causing the risk ☐ Family members of the perpetrator(s) / alleged perpetrator(s) / putative perpetrator(s) / person(s) causing the risk ☐ Others (please specify): Sweden: A non-contact order is issued in respect of one person who is prohibited from contacting another person. 	prohibited person and the intermediary may face criminal sanctions for the breach. Also, separate non-contact orders may be issued in respect of family members of a prohibited person, if the conditions for issuing a non-contact order are met. An interim injunction prohibiting the spouses from visiting each other based on the Marriage Code or the Cohabitees Act is a mutual protection order. An exit ban or a temporary exit ban based on the Care of Young persons (Special Provisions) Act is issued for the child who needs to be protected from being taken abroad/leaving the country. EU: Directive (EU) 2024/1385 provides that orders are addressed to an offender or suspect of an act of violence covered by the Directive (art. 19(1)).

H. Supplementary matters

8.	Can supplementary matters, which may or may not be directly related to the immediate safety of the protected person(s), be addressed in protection orders? ☐ Yes (please specify): ☐ Child custody ☐ Maintenance ☐ Property protection ☐ Mandatory counselling (to the extent not covered by Question 1) ☐ Other (please specify): Please insert text here ☒ No ☐ In some cases (please specify): Please insert text here

I. Duration of protection orders

9.	Please provide details regarding the possible duration of protection orders issued in your jurisdiction. Shortest duration for fixed term orders (incl. interim / emergency orders): Please indicate the shortest time frame for such orders: Sweden: Non-contact orders for the joint home may be issued for a maximum time frame of two months. Please provide examples of such orders: Longest duration for fixed term orders: Please indicate the longest time frame for such orders: Sweden: All other non-contact orders than non-contact orders for the joint home may be issued for a maximum time frame of one year. Please provide examples of such orders: Indefinite duration: ☒ Yes

	EU: Directive (EU) 2024/1385 provides that restraining orders and protection orders must remain in force for as long as necessary to protect the victim the protection orders (art. 19(2)). Emergency barring orders, restraining orders or protection orders should be issued either for a specified period or until modified or discharged (recital 45). ☒ No Sweden: An exit ban based on the Care of Young persons (Special Provisions) Act must be terminated when there is no longer any reason for it, The social welfare committee must review whether the ban should be terminated at least every sixth month. An exit ban cease to have effect at the latest when the child attains the age of 18. Sweden: A removal ban based on the Care of Young persons (Special Provisions) Act may be issued for a specified period or until further notice. The social welfare committee must consider at least once every three months whether a removal ban is still needed. When a removal ban is no longer needed, the social welfare committee must decide to terminate the ban. A removal ban ceases to have effect at the latest when the child attains the age of 18. Renewal of protection orders: ☒ All protection orders are potentially renewable (please specify any conditions or limitations, if applicable): Sweden: Non-contact orders for the joint home may be extended by two weeks at a time, if there are special reasons for it. A non-contact order which is monitored electronically (e.g. by an electronic bracelet) may be extended by a maximum time frame of three months at a time. All other non-contact orders (except for non-contact orders for the joint home) may be extended by one year at a time. EU: To ensure that protection remains effective over time, Directive (EU) 2024/1385 requires competent authorities to review the victim's individual risk assessment regularly and, where appropriate, modify or adopt new protection measures to reflect the victim's evolving circumstances and protection needs. For instance, such a review could take place at important junctures in the process, such as the commencement of court proceedings, the handing down of a judgment or order, or in the context of proceedings for the revision of custody arrangements or rights of access. (art. 16(7) and recital 40). However, as indicated in the response to Question 25 below, it should be recalled that the recognition of civil protection measures under Regulation (EU) No 606/2013 is limited to a period of 12 months, irrespective of whether the protection measure itself has a longer duration. Directive 2011/99/EU does not provide for an equivalent uniform time limit. Any temporal limitation therefore depends on the applicable rules of the executing State. Criminal protection measures may, for example, be subject to temporal limitations linked to the duration or stage of the criminal proceeding”. ☐ Some protection orders are potentially renewable (please specify): Please insert text here ☒ Protection orders are not renewable: Sweden: In cases based on the Marriage Code or the Cohabitees Act, the interim injunction prohibiting the spouses from visiting each other is always temporary. It lasts no longer than until the division of property has taken place.

A. Registers

15.	Are there any registers in your jurisdiction to monitor protection orders? ☐ Yes (please specify): ☐ National database: ☐ Accessible to police ☐ Accessible to courts ☐ Accessible to others (please specify): ☐ Regional database(s): ☐ Accessible to police ☐ Accessible to courts ☐ Accessible to others (please specify): Please insert text here ☐ Local / municipal database(s): ☐ Accessible to police ☐ Accessible to courts ☐ Accessible to others (please specify): Please insert text here ☐ No ☒ Other (please specify): Sweden: A non-contact order is registered in, respectively, the case management system of the Swedish Police Authority and the Swedish Prosecution Authority and therefore accessible to the police and to prosecutors.

	A non-contact order is also registered on the prohibited person in the Swedish criminal record, which is administrated by the Swedish Police Authority. However, the purpose of the criminal record is not to monitor the compliance with non-contact orders. Information in the criminal record is accessible to prosecutors. It is also accessible to the general courts for sentencing and determination of the appropriate sanction. Under certain conditions, information from the criminal record may also be accessible to other authorities and organisations, although in some cases information concerning non-contact orders are excluded from such extracts. A decision by a Swedish prosecutor to issue a European protection order is registered in the case management system of the Swedish Prosecution Authority but not registered in the Swedish criminal record. A European protection order from another EU Member State is upon enforcement included in the Swedish criminal record. The conditions are the same as a domestic non-contact order. A protection measure in civil matters ordered in another EU Member State is registered by a prosecutor in the case management system of the Swedish Prosecution Authority. A copy of a decision on an exit ban or a temporary exit ban based on the Care of Young persons (Special Provisions) Act must immediately be sent to the Swedish Police Authority so that the police can invalidat or revoke the child's Swedish passport.

III. Current national, regional, and international rules for the recognition and enforcement of foreign protection orders

Part III aims to identify all applicable rules in your jurisdiction pertaining to the recognition and enforcement of foreign protection orders, including those rules deriving from regional or international instruments.

In this regard, jurisdictions may have adopted a specific legal regime for foreign protection orders, which may cover all or only certain aspects of their recognition and enforcement. In the absence of, or alongside, such a specific regime, general rules on recognition and enforcement may apply. In some jurisdictions, foreign protection orders may not be recognised or enforced at all. Where a specific regime does not address all relevant issues, any remaining matters may or may not fall within the scope of a general regime. Sections F, G, and H below are designed to accommodate these different approaches.

General comment

The replies submitted by the European Union in Sections F and G of Part III relate exclusively to EU (regional) instruments applicable between EU Member States.

With regard to information provided in this question 20 of Section F, the objective is to provide a comprehensive overview of the recognition and enforcement of protection measures available under the relevant EU instruments, in accordance with the introductory note to the Questionnaire in Part II, and in particular points 4 and 5 thereof. However, the replies provided in Section G relate exclusively to Regulation (EU) 606/2013 on the mutual recognition of protection measures in civil matters and Directive 2011/99/EU on European Protection orders in criminal matters.

In addition to the legal framework established by EU instruments, bilateral international agreements concluded by individual EU Member States may, where applicable, constitute a legal basis for the recognition and enforcement of protection measures in relations with third countries. Accordingly, EU Member States may supplement the coordinated EU replies in Part III by providing information on such legal frameworks, where relevant.

⁴ Please complete section H below, if applicable.

EU Member States may also provide information on Part III on their respective national legal frameworks. In particular, where no applicable international or EU instrument governs the recognition and enforcement of protection measures, such measures may, under certain national legal systems, be recognised and enforced on the basis of the general rules of national private international law. In such cases, Section H may also be completed to reflect the relevant national legal framework.

I. Overview of the EU instruments

Specific rules of recognition and enforcement of certain foreign protection orders apply between EU Member States. The EU rules on the mutual recognition of protection measures are set up in Regulation 606/2013 on mutual recognition of protection measures in civil matters and Directive 2011/99/EU on the European protection order (EPO Directive) in criminal matters. These instruments are complementary to each other and allow for the portability of national protection measures for people in danger when they travel or move to another EU Member State.

Additionally, Council Regulation (EU) 2019/1111 of 25 June 2019 on jurisdiction, the recognition and enforcement of decisions in matrimonial matters and the matters of parental responsibility, and on international child abduction (recast) ("the Brussels IIb Regulation") also provides for the recognition and enforcement of foreign protection orders issued to protect children in certain cases, and these rules only apply between EU Member States.

Furthermore, for a more comprehensive presentation of EU instruments adopted to strengthen the protection of victims, general information is also provided on Directive (EU) 2024/1385 on combating violence against women and domestic violence which lays down a framework for emergency barring orders, restraining orders and protection orders as key measures for protecting victims and their dependants from further harms (supplementing replies provided in Part I), and Directive 2012/29/EU of 25 October 2012 establishing minimum standards on the rights, support and protection of victims of crime, amended by Directive (EU) 2026/1472 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 17 June 2026. The latter provides that every victim is offered protection measures during criminal proceedings in accordance with their needs. It must be specified that these two Directives do not provide for EU rules on mutual recognition of protection measures as such.

II. The EU systems of cross-border recognition and enforcement of protection orders

The EU has two complementary, but distinct cross-border mechanisms rather than a single system for protection orders. The distinction is based on the legal nature of the underlying national protection measures. Protection measures adopted in criminal matters fall within the scope of Directive 2011/99/EU on the European Protection Order (EPO), whereas protection measures of a civil nature are governed by Regulation (EU) No 606/2013 on the mutual recognition of protection measures in civil matters. The two instruments operate through different recognition and enforcement mechanisms. The applicable instrument is determined by the legal nature of the underlying national protection measure, namely whether it is civil or criminal.

Under Directive 2011/99/EU, the issuing Member State first issues a European Protection Order based on an existing national criminal protection measure. Upon receipt of the EPO, the executing Member State adopts, in accordance with its own national law, an equivalent protection measure to ensure continued protection of the protected person. The mechanism is therefore based on the recognition of the European Protection Order followed by the adoption of a corresponding national measure by the executing State.

By contrast, Regulation (EU) No 606/2013 provides for the direct recognition of a civil protection measure. The protected person obtains a standard certificate from the issuing authority, and the protection measure is recognised in the other Member State without any special procedure or declaration of enforceability (exequatur). No equivalent national measure needs to be adopted by the Executing State.

III. In more detail on Regulation (EU) 606/2013

Regulation (EU) 606/2013 lays down rules for the mutual recognition of protection measures in civil matters ordered in Member States. These rules enable the competent authorities to ensure continuous protection throughout the EU using a simple and rapid mechanism.

It only applies to cross-border cases.

For the purposes of this Regulation, a case is deemed to be a cross-border case where the recognition of a measure ordered in one EU Member State is sought in another Member State (article 2 (2)). The Regulation which entered into force 19 July 2013 applies to all EU Member States except Denmark since 11 January 2015.

More specifically, Regulation 606/2013 applies to measures that impose obligations on a person causing a risk to another person's physical or psychological integrity and whose purpose is to protect this other person.

The Regulation defines a 'protected person' as a natural person who is the object of the protection afforded by a protection measure' (article 3(2)) without specifying if the protection person is an adult or child. However, this Regulation does not apply to protection measures falling the scope of Regulation (EC) No 2201/2003 (article 2(3)) which has been repealed by the "Brussels IIb Regulation") and which is applicable since 1 August 2022. It is clearly provided that decisions taken under the Brussels IIa (now the Brussels IIb) Regulation continue to be recognised and enforced under that Regulation (recital 11). The Brussels IIb Regulation covers only measures for the protection of the child in certain circumstances (art. 15, art. 27(5), to be read in conjunction with recitals 30, 44, 45).

Regulation 606/2013 applies to all victims, regardless of whether they are victims of gender-based violence (recital 6).

It covers the three most common types of national protection measures (Article 3(1)) which is specified in Section G.

In practice, the person (the "protected person") who receives protection under one or more national protection measure(s) makes a request to the authority of the Member State (the "issuing authority") in which the protecting measures are ordered. If the request is granted, the issuing authority in this Member State (the "Member State of origin") issues a certificate (Article 5(1)).

The certificate on protection measures in civil matters takes the form of a multilingual standard template, which was adopted by a subsequent implementing act (<https://eur-lex.europa.eu/legal-content/EN/TXT/?uri=CELEX%3A32014R0939&qid=1760428470718>).

The Member State in which the recognition and, where applicable, the enforcement of the protection measure is sought is the "Member State addressed" (Article 3(6)).

This Regulation takes account of the different legal traditions of the Member States and does not interfere with the national systems for ordering protection measures. The Regulation does not oblige the Member States to modify their national systems so as to enable protection measures to be ordered in civil matters, or to introduce protection measures in civil matters for the application of this Regulation (recital 12).

IV. In more detail on Directive 2011/99/EU ("EPO")

Together with Regulation (EU) 606/2013 and with Directive 2012/29/EU establishing minimum standards on the rights, support and protection of victims of crime, Directive 2011/99/EU on the European protection order (EPO) in criminal matters ('the Directive') formed a package of measures aimed at strengthening the rights and protection of victims of crime in the EU.

More concretely, and as illustrated above, Directive 2011/99/EU and Regulation (EU) 606/13 deal with the recognition of protection orders in criminal and civil matters and aim at strengthening the protection of persons in need (victims and potential victims) when they travel or move to another Member State.

The Directive which entered into force since 10 January 2012 is binding on all Member States with the exception of Ireland and Denmark. Member States had to transpose it by 11 January 2015.

The objective of the Directive is to ensure that a person who benefits from a protection measure in one Member State can continue to rely on such protection when moving or traveling to another Member State. The Directive sets out rules enabling competent authorities to ensure such continuous protection throughout the Union.

The Directive requires the competent authorities in the issuing State to issue, on the basis of a national protection order, a separate instrument, the European protection order ('EPO', set out in Annex I of the Directive), and transmit it to the competent authorities in the executing Member State for recognition and execution. The executing authority can adopt any measure, available under their national law in a similar case, in order to provide continued protection to the protected person. Based on this instrument the competent executing authority can continue protecting the protected person in its own territory.

The Directive is applicable to national protection measures which aim at protecting a person against criminal acts which may endanger their life, physical, psychological or sexual integrity, dignity or personal liberty.

It is applicable to the three most common types of national protection measures (Article 5) and the issuance of a EPO is not automatic as outlined under Section G.

The Directive also provides that the protected person may submit a request for the issuance of a EPO to the competent authority of the issuing State or the executing State. The latter is obliged to transfer the request as soon as possible to the competent authority of the issuing State (Article 6(3)).

Before the issuance of a EPO, the person causing danger has the right to be heard and to challenge the national protection measure if that person has not been granted these rights in the procedure leading to the adoption of the national protection measure (Article 6(4)).

Upon adoption of a national protection measure the competent authority should inform the protected person about the possibility of requesting a EPO, in accordance with the procedures under its national law (Article 6(5)).

If the request to issue a EPO is rejected, the competent authority of the issuing State must inform the protected person of any applicable legal remedies that are available under its national law against such a decision (Article 6(7)).

In Section G, more detail is provided on the recognition of a EPO, the grounds for non-recognition of a EPO and the obligations on the competent authority of the executing State to provide information when it refuses to recognise a EPO as well as on the procedures for the adoption and enforcement of the protection measures.

The Directive does not provide for a self-standing legal remedy for the person causing danger, should this person wish to challenge the protection measure adopted in the executing State. In this regard, the Directive refers to the national procedures, if they exist in the domestic law of that State. It should be noted that the Directive does not provide for an obligation to inform the person causing danger of the remedies available.

Consequences in the event of a breach of the protection measure:

The Directive deals with sanctions and other legal consequences in the event of a breach of one or more of the measures taken by the executing State following the recognition of a EPO (Article 11(2)). The executing State can impose criminal penalties and take any other measure as a consequence of the breach, if that breach amounts to a criminal offence under the law of that State (Article 11(2)(a)). This State is also allowed to take any non-criminal decisions related to the breach (Article 11(2)(b)) and any urgent and provisional measure to put an end to the breach pending, where appropriate, a subsequent decision by the issuing State (Article 11(2)(c)).

The Directive obliges the executing State to notify the issuing State or the State of supervision of any breach of the measure or measures taken on the basis of a EPO (Article 12). The purpose of this notification is to enable the competent authority of the issuing State to promptly decide on any appropriate response with respect to the protection measure imposed in that State on the person causing danger (recital 26). To facilitate the notification, the Directive provides a uniform standard form in Annex II and obliges the competent authority of the executing State to use it (Article 12). The form should contain standard information on the persons concerned, details on the EPO and the competent authorities.

V. On Council Regulation (EU) 2019/1111 of 25 June 2019 on jurisdiction, the recognition and enforcement of decisions in matrimonial matters and the matters of parental responsibility, and on international child abduction (recast) ("the Brussels IIb Regulation")

At Union level, the Brussels IIb Regulation also provides specific rules of recognition and enforcement for foreign protection orders issued to protect children in certain circumstances.

Specifically, Article 15 of the Brussels IIb Regulation ensures that courts having jurisdiction as to the substance of the matter pursuant to Article 2(1)(b) can also issue provisional, including protective, measures which are then recognised and enforced across all EU Member States in accordance with the rules of the Regulation.

In addition, this Regulation provides that in cases of international child abduction, the court of refuge which orders the return of the child may, where appropriate, take provisional, including protective measures under art. 15 in order to protect the child from the grave risk referred under art. 13(1)(b) of the 1980 Abduction Hague Convention, as long as the examining and taking of such measures do not delay the return proceedings (art. 27(5)). Therefore, these measures if ordered may circulate and hence be recognised and enforced in the EU Member State to which the child is returned to (recitals 30, 44, 45).

Moreover, Article 27(3), read in conjunction with Recital 45, provides that where a court of the Member State of refuge considers refusing the return of a child solely on the basis of Article 13(1)(b) of the 1980 Hague Convention, it shall assess whether appropriate measures of protection have been put in place in the Member State of the habitual residence of the child prior to the abduction or might be taken there to protect the child from a grave risk referred to in this provision.

It should be clarified that, under the Brussels IIb Regulation, these protection measures can only be ordered for the child and not the [adult] abducting parent. The abducting parent can also apply for protection measures to the court of refuge and these protection measures could be recognised in another EU Member State under the frameworks set up in Regulation (EU) 606/2013 on mutual recognition of protection measures in civil matters or Directive 2011/99 on the European protection order in criminal matters.

VI. Other relevant EU instruments:

1. Council of Europe Convention on preventing and combating violence against women and domestic violence ("the Istanbul Convention") and Directive (EU) 2024/1385 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 14 May 2024 on combating violence against women and domestic violence ("Directive on violence against women"):

In 2023, the EU became the 38th Party to the Istanbul Convention. The EU has acceded to the Convention as regards matters falling within its exclusive competence, namely with regard to matters related to institutions and public administration of the Union and with regard to matters related to judicial cooperation in criminal matters, asylum and non-refoulement.

On 13 June 2024, the Directive on violence against women introducing the first ever EU rules on combating violence against women and domestic violence, entered into force. The Directive which implements and builds on the standards of the Istanbul Convention applies to all victims of violence against women and domestic violence, regardless of their age.

EU Member States have until 14 June 2027 to transpose the Directive into their national law. More information is available: <https://commission.europa.eu/strategy-and-> policy/policies/justice-and-fundamental-rights/gender-equality/gender-based-violence/ending-gender-based-violence_en

It is important to explain why the EU legislature adopted the new rules in Article 19 of the Directive on violence against women which establish a framework for emergency barring orders, restraining orders and protection orders as key tools for protecting victims and their dependants from further violence. From the outset, the EU legislature recognised that the divergent national protection measures varied considerably across the EU and a person protected in one Member State could due to this variety lose effective protection when moving to or being present in another Member State. This undermined free movement and legal certainty and contributed to the under use and proper functioning of the frameworks set in Regulation (EU) 606/2013 and Directive 2011/99.

Therefore, these minimum standards set in art. 19 aim at strengthening substantive law on protection orders and facilitating their cross-border effectiveness, thus strengthening the protection for victims.

As also recognised in the Explanatory Memorandum to the Istanbul Convention, in situations of immediate danger, the most effective way to guarantee a victim's safety is often to create physical distance between the victim and the perpetrator. Rather than placing the burden on victims—who may be accompanied by dependent children and have limited resources—to leave their home and seek safety elsewhere, the objective is to remove the perpetrator and allow the victim to remain in the residence.

In line with this approach, Article 19(1) requires Member States to ensure that competent authorities can, without undue delay, order a suspect or offender to leave the victim's residence and prohibit contact with the victim or dependants. These measures correspond to what the Istanbul Convention refers to as emergency barring orders and are intended for acute situations requiring immediate intervention. Importantly, such orders must take effect immediately and must not be conditional on the victim reporting the offence or on the completion of an individual risk assessment, although Member States may require an adult victim to request the order.

Article 19(2) further requires Member States to ensure the availability of restraining orders and protection orders that can provide protection for victims for as long as necessary. While emergency barring orders address immediate risks, restraining and protection orders are designed to provide longer-term safeguards, with the appropriate duration to be determined by the competent authorities in light of the circumstances of the case. The importance of ensuring the availability and effectiveness of these measures is reflected in the Council of Europe's monitoring body under the Istanbul Convention (GREVIO) country monitoring work, where deficiencies in the practical operation of protection orders are frequently identified and recommendations are regularly issued to strengthen their use.

To ensure their effectiveness, Article 19 also requires Member States to inform victims about the possibility of obtaining such orders and, where relevant, seeking their cross-border recognition within the EU. Furthermore, breaches of emergency barring orders, restraining orders or protection orders must be subject to effective, proportionate and dissuasive sanctions, whether criminal or non-criminal. This reflects the approach of the Istanbul Convention and recognises that protection orders can only be effective if violations are taken seriously.

Article 19 additionally requires that victims be offered the opportunity to be notified without undue delay of any breach that may affect their safety and that such breaches trigger a reconsideration of the victim's risk assessment where necessary.

Article 16 of the Directive establishes a risk-based framework which requires Member States to establish an individual risk assessment mechanism to identify the protection needs of victims of sexual violence and domestic violence. Under Article 16(2), competent authorities must, at the earliest possible stage, identify the victim's specific protection needs through an individual assessment, carried out where appropriate in cooperation with other competent authorities. The assessment aims to determine the level of risk posed by the offender or suspect and serves as the basis for deciding on appropriate protective measures.

Article 16(5) requires competent authorities to translate the findings of the assessment into concrete protection measures tailored to the victim's needs. Depending on the risks identified, these measures may include special protection measures during criminal proceedings, emergency barring orders, restraining orders or protection orders under Article 19, and other measures aimed at managing the offender's or suspect's behaviour. The individual assessment therefore functions as the gateway to the protection framework established by the Directive, ensuring that protective measures are proportionate to the victim's specific circumstances and the level of risk identified. (More information on art. 16 is provided in Part I).

VII. On Directive 2012/29/EU of 25 October 2012 establishing minimum standards on the rights, support and protection of victims of crime, amended by Directive (EU) 2026/1472 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 17 June 2026 ("2021 Victims' Right Directive"):

The 2012 Victims' Rights Directive provides general rules applicable to all victims of crime. It provides that every victim is offered protection measures during criminal proceedings in accordance with their needs. Under this instrument, all victims have an individual assessment to identify specific protection and support needs (the latter was recently adopted as part of the revised Directive) and to determine whether and to what extent they would benefit from special measures in the course of criminal proceedings.

In particular:

Article 4 requires that Member States shall ensure that victims are offered, without unnecessary delay and from their first contact with a competent authority, information about how and under what conditions they can obtain protection, including protection measures.

Article 18 requires that Member States shall ensure that "measures are available to protect victims and their family members from secondary and repeat victimisation, from intimidation and from retaliation, including against the risk of emotional or psychological harm, and to protect the dignity of victims during questioning and when testifying. When necessary, such measures shall also include procedures established under national law for the physical protection of victims and their family members".

The recently adopted revision of the Victims' Rights Directive further strengthens the rights of all victims of crime, including ensuring victims' physical protection.

Under the revised Directive, Member States are obliged to notify victims without unnecessary delay of their right to receive certain information about the criminal proceedings instituted as a result of the complaint and that, upon request, victims receive information on the availability of protection measures, including protection orders (Article 6(1)(d)).

The revised Directive also aims to ensure that victims of crime will have access to measures for their physical protection if such a need is identified by victims' individual assessment. Measures for physical protection should include the presence of law enforcement authorities or other bodies providing physical protection, measures to keep the offender away from the victim on the basis of national barring, restraining or protection orders or referrals to shelters and other interim accommodation (Article 23(4)). Such measures can be of a criminal, administrative or civil law nature. Where relevant and appropriate, the individual assessment shall also take into account the specific needs of the victim's family members (Article 22(3)).

Under Article 23(5) of the revised Directive, Member States are obliged to ensure that, where relevant for the safety of the victim, the competent authorities will inform the victim of the possibility to apply for barring, restraining or protection orders and the possibility to seek the cross-border recognition of protection orders in accordance with Directive 2011/99 or protection measures pursuant to Regulation (EU) 606/2013. Article 3(4) of Regulation No 606/2013 provides that an 'issuing authority' means any judicial authority, or any other authority designated by a Member State as having competence in the matters falling within the scope of this Regulation, provided that such other authority offers guarantees to the parties with regard to impartiality, and that its decisions in relation to the protection measure may, under the law of the Member State in which it operates, be made subject to review by a judicial authority and have similar force and effects to those of a decision of a judicial authority on the same matter. Directive 2011/99/EU

A foreign protection order falls within the scope of the rules of recognition and enforcement of the Directive if it is a protection measure adopted in criminal matters in the issuing State.

However, the Directive requires the competent authorities in the issuing State to issue, on the basis of a national protection order, a separate instrument, the European protection order ('EPO', set out in Annex I of the Directive) (article 7), and transmit it to the competent authorities in the executing Member State for recognition and execution. The executing authority can adopt any measure, available under their national law in a similar case, in order to provide continued protection to the protected person. Based on this instrument the competent executing authority can continue protecting the protected person in its own territory.

Article 2(2) defines a protection measure as a decision in criminal matters adopted in the issuing State in accordance with its national law and procedures by which one or more of the prohibitions or restrictions referred to in Article 5 are imposed on a person causing danger in order to protect a protected person against a criminal act which may endanger his life, physical or psychological integrity, dignity, personal liberty or sexual integrity.

Article 2(5) states that an 'issuing State' means the Member State in which a protection measure has been adopted that constitutes the basis for issuing a European protection order.

Article 2(6) defines the 'executing State' as the Member State to which a European protection order has been forwarded with a view to its recognition;

While Article 2(1) defines a 'European protection order' (EPO) as meaning a decision, taken by a judicial or equivalent authority of a Member State in relation to a protection measure, on the basis of which a judicial or equivalent authority of another Member State takes any appropriate measure or measures under its own national law with a view to continuing the protection of the protected person.

The competent authority in the issuing State must verify whether the conditions for issuing a EPO laid down in Article 5 are fulfilled, that is, it would only issue a EPO when a protection measure has been previously adopted in the issuing State, imposing on the person causing danger one or more of the following prohibitions or restrictions:

(a) a prohibition from entering certain localities, places or defined areas where the protected person resides or visits;

(b) a prohibition or regulation of contact, in any form, with the protected person, including by phone, electronic or ordinary mail, fax or any other means; or and (c) a prohibition or regulation on approaching the protected person closer than a prescribed distance.

Additionally, the competent authority in the issuing State must also take into account the length of the intended stay and the seriousness of the need for protection (Article 6(1)).

	Under the Directive, the recognition of a EPO is not automatic. The executing State needs to order an equivalent measure available under its national law. Upon receipt of a EPO the executing State must, without undue delay, recognise it and adopt a relevant protection measure that is available under its national law in a similar case (Article 9(1) and (2)). The competent authority of the executing State has a degree of discretion in determining such a measure, and may apply, in accordance with its national law, criminal, administrative or civil measures (Article 9(1) and recital 20). The measure adopted by the competent authority of the executing State as well as any other measure taken on the basis of a subsequent decision as referred to in Article 11, shall, to the highest degree possible, correspond to the protection measure adopted in the issuing State. (Article 9(2) and recital 20). Procedures for the adoption and enforcement of the protection measures: According to the Directive, the executing State must be competent to adopt and enforce protection measures on its territory following the recognition of a EPO and the law of that State shall apply to such decisions (Article 11(1)). The law of the executing State must also apply to the legal remedies against decisions adopted in that State in relation to the EPO. On the appeal/ challenge of the Protection The Directive does not provide for a self-standing legal remedy for the person causing danger, should this person wish to challenge the protection measure adopted in the executing State. In this regard, the Directive refers to the national procedures, if they exist in the domestic law of that State. It should be noted that the Directive does not provide for an obligation to inform the person causing danger of the remedies available. Directive 2011/99/EU on the European protection order (EPO) in criminal matters. It states that, irrespective of whether the protection measure has a longer duration, the effects of recognition shall be limited to a period of 12 months, starting from the date of the issuing of the certificate in accordance with Article 4(4) of Regulation 606/2013. As explained in recital 15, this is by way of exception given the diversity of protection measures under the laws of the Member States, in particular in terms of their duration, as well as the fact that this Regulation will typically apply in urgent situations. In cases where the duration of a protection measure is longer than 12 months, the limitation of the effects of recognition under the Regulation should be without prejudice to the right of the protected person to invoke that protection measure under any other available legal act of the Union providing for recognition or to apply for a national protection measure in the Member State addressed (recital 16).. ☒ No EU: Directive 2011/99/EU Under Directive 2011/99/EU any temporal limitation depends on the legal rules applicable in the executing State, not on a uniform limitation laid down by the Directive itself. Please provide information on whether such orders can / need to be adapted in order to be recognised and enforced in your jurisdiction and if the modalities of enforcement also can / must be adapted (e.g., enforcement by courts in your jurisdiction as opposed to police in the jurisdiction where the order was issued). EU: Regulation (EU) 606/2013 on protection measures in civil matters The Regulation does not oblige the Member States to modify their national systems so as to enable protection measures to be ordered in civil matters, or to introduce protection measures in civil matters for the application of this Regulation (recital 12). However, its Article 13(3) provides that the recognition of the protection measure may not be refused on the ground that the law of the Member State addressed does not allow for such a measure based on the same facts. This should be read in conjunction with its recital 14, stating that based on the principle of mutual recognition, protection measures ordered in civil matters in the Member State of origin should be recognised in the Member State addressed as protection measures in civil matters in accordance with Regulation No 606/2013. Directive 2011/99/EU on the European protection order (EPO) in criminal matters. If there is no available measure at national level in a similar case that could be taken in the executing State, the competent authority of the executing State shall report to the competent authority of the issuing State any breach of the protection measure described in the European protection order of which it is aware (Article 11(3)).

Directive 2011/99/EU There are nine grounds for non-recognition of a EPO (Article 10(1)), set out in the Directive. The executing authorities may refuse to recognise a EPO in the following circumstances: (a) the European protection order is not complete or has not been completed within the time limit set by the competent authority of the executing State; (b) the requirements set out in Article 5 have not been met; (c) the protection measure relates to an act that does not constitute a criminal offence under the law of the executing State; (d) the protection derives from the execution of a penalty or measure that, according to the law of the executing State, is covered by an amnesty and relates to an act or conduct which falls within its competence according to that law;

	(e) there is immunity conferred under the law of the executing State on the person causing danger, which makes it impossible to adopt measures on the basis of a European protection order; (f) criminal prosecution, against the person causing danger, for the act or the conduct in relation to which the protection measure has been adopted is statute-barred under the law of the executing State, when the act or the conduct falls within its competence under its national law; (g) recognition of the European protection order would contravene the ne bis in idem principle; (h) under the law of the executing State, the person causing danger cannot, because of that person's age, be held criminally responsible for the act or the conduct in relation to which the protection measure has been adopted; (i) the protection measure relates to a criminal offence which, under the law of the executing State, is regarded as having been committed, wholly or for a major or essential part, within its territory. The Directive also imposes a number of information obligations on the competent authority of the executing State which refuses to recognise a EPO (Article 10(2)). This competent authority must inform the issuing State and the protected person of this refusal and of the grounds for it without undue delay. Furthermore, the competent authority of the executing State must, where appropriate, inform the protected person about the possibility of requesting the adoption of a protection measure in accordance with its national law. The protected person is also to be informed by the competent authority of the executing State of any applicable legal remedies available under this State's national law against the decision on non-recognition.EU: ☐ No

	Member State. Digital communication can make a practical contribution to the effective implementation of boall three th instruments. With regard to the EPO Directive and Regulation 606/2013, The decentralised IT system supporting these efforts will enable competent authorities to exchange European Protection Orders, protection measures and the information necessary for their recognition and enforcement directly and securely. It will reduce reliance on paper-based exchanges and manual processing, help authorities act more swiftly, and reduce the risk of avoidable delays. In practice, it will facilitate the timely recognition and enforcement of protection measures in the Member State concerned, helping to prevent gaps in protection following a cross-border move.. The system is expected to bec ome operational in 2030.Natural or legal persons or their representatives will be able to also communicate with competent authorities through the European Electronic Access Point in proceedings related to recognition and declaration of enforceability of foreign protection orders or to request the relevant certificates. The system is tentatively expected to become operational around 2032. The coordinated reply should be updated to reflect the revised timeline of the digitalisation of individual batches. With regard to the Brussels IIb Regulation, the decentralised IT system will enable the competent authorities, including Central Authorities, to exchange requests for judicial cooperation such as requests for return of a child under the 1980 Hague Convention and requests for cooperation in matters of parental responsibility. Holders of parental responsibility or their representatives will also be able to communicate with Central Authorities and other competent authorities through the European Electronic Access Point that is also part of the decentralised IT system, in proceedings related to recognition and declaration of enforceability of a foreign decision under the Brussels IIb Regulation (including the relevant certificates) or in matters of parental responsibility and requests for return under the 1980 Hague Convention. The system is tentatively expected to become operational around 2033.

VI. Other comments

Please use the space below to provide any additional information pertaining to the recognition and enforcement of (foreign) protection orders in your jurisdiction. You may also wish to make any suggestions pertaining to the work of the WG on REPO (general comments or specific comments in advance of the first WG meeting in November 2026).

37.

EU: Specific comments in advance of the WG meeting in November 2026:

The Union proposes that discussions at the November meeting be guided by a discussion paper addressing specific questions including the objective and scope pursued by the project, and how this proposed work interacts with the existing Hague Conventions, in particular the 1996 Child Protection Convention and the 1980 Child Abduction Convention. This approach would help the Working Group use the available time efficiently, facilitate focused and structured exchanges, and allow participants to prepare in advance and consult internally as needed.

For instance, the Union suggests that one of the discussion questions could be focused on the relationship of the 1980 Child Abduction Convention and the 1996 Child Protection Convention with a future REPO instrument. The Union is ready to provide additional and more detailed questions for consideration in the potential discussion paper.

The responses based on structured discussions would also assist the Working Group in assessing the feasibility of a future instrument and could contribute to the preparation of the report to CGAP 2027.

Final comment

The Union would appreciate the timely circulation of the draft agenda and any supporting documents, as this would greatly facilitate preparation for the meeting and allow participants sufficient time to undertake any necessary internal consultations.

Objectively, the draft agenda and any supporting documents should be published by the 1st week of October 2026.
